PLANNING GUIDE

What is a Will?

A Will serves as crucial document, ensuring that one's assets are distributed according to their wishes after death.

Beyond asset distribution, a Will can designate guardianship for minor children, specify funeral arrangements, and minimize family disputes.

What is in a Will?

Here are important items you may wish to add to your Will:

Heirloom
House/Cabin
Business
Vehicles/RV
$$$

A Legal Will ensures:

- To decide who will get your property when you die.
- To keep your assets out of the hands of people you don't want to have them.
- To identify who should care for your children.
- To make it easier for your heirs to get access to your assets.

Without a Will, the courts will decide.

Who involves in a Will?

Testator: The owner of the Last Will and Testament. Once the testator dies, their estate gets distributed according to the terms of their Will.

Executor: Also known as a personal representative, the executor administers the Last Will and Testament.

Beneficiary: A beneficiary is someone who will receive something from the estate. You may name multiple beneficiaries and divide your assets as you see fit.
